1. Basic Information

1.1 Introduction to Yuanling County, Huaihua City, Hunan Province, China

Yuanling County, Huaihua City, Hunan Province, China, was formerly known as Chenzhou, with its name reflecting the geographical feature of "by the Yuan River, with hills and valleys in sight" ("Yuan" refers to the mighty river flowing through western Hunan, while "Ling" denotes the undulating hills and mountains). Located at the confluence of the middle reaches of the Yuan River and the You River, Yuanling has long been known as the "Gateway to Western Hunan," serving as a millennium-old waterway stronghold connecting the Central Plains and the southwest, as well as the core cultural and ecological area of Greater Western Hunan. As a melting pot of Chu culture, Qianzhong culture, and ethnic minority cultures, it is leveraging its profound historical heritage and ecological advantages to strive for becoming a model county for cultural and tourism integration in the Wuling Mountain region and a regional historic and cultural city.

Yuanling County is located in the northwest of Hunan Province, boasting the most picturesque section of the "Thousand-Mile Yuan River" landscape gallery. It is one of the earliest regions in China to engage in dragon boat racing and is widely recognized as the birthplace of China's traditional dragon boat culture. The county enjoys profound accolades such as "China's Traditional Dragon Boat Hometown," "Ancient Chu and Qin Prefecture, a Millennium-Old Chenzhou," "Provincial Historical and Cultural City," "The Source of Jietan Tea Culture," and "A Heartrendingly Beautiful Place in Shen Congwen's Writings."

Dragon boat racing has been practiced in Yuanling for over two thousand years, with its unique tradition of racing across waterways predating the dragon boat folk rituals commemorating Qu Yuan by several centuries, forming a rare pristine dragon boat cultural system nationwide. In recent years, Yuanling has successfully hosted a series of high-level events, including the "National Dragon Boat Invitational," "National Traditional Dragon Boat Competition," "International Traditional Dragon Boat Invitational," and the "2025 China Canoeing Tour Finals."
